FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Industrial College

BY ADM. WILLIAM M. FECHTELER, USN
Chief of Naval Operations

(The following remarks were made by Admiral Fechteler, outgoing Chief of Naval Operations on 18 June to graduates of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces in Washington, D. C.)

YOU have all been in the Armed Forces of the United States long enough to know some of the facts of military life. Many of these facts are gay. But don't forget that most are grim.

We all have had our ups and downs as individuals. We are also familiar with the alterations in the public regard for the necessity of Armed Forces during peace and war. We pay a price for these changes. But that is our privilege.

One of the facts of military life in a democracy, such as ours, is that we tend to neglect our defenses when there is no active threat to our security. A leaky roof normally provides enough shade when the sun is shining. But when we fear for our national safety we gather up weapons at a great rate. Then if the threat diminishes a little or if we live with it long enough, we may wonder about our rate of armament and question its worth.

You probably recognize the situation today. The military feasts and the periods of famine have always plagued the military and naval planners and the procurement officers of the military departments.

If there ever was a time for orderly planning and procurement, it is the present. I do not recall a more difficult period. My memory and experience goes back for more than forty years. Yet our future depends on the utmost of skill and care in plans for security.

It is considered appropriate for speakers in my place to call a graduating class' attention to the challenges of life and the problems they will face as they leave their alma mater. It is quite unnecessary in your case. Your problems are in full bloom. There is a redolent bouquet waiting for your attention and arrangement. It is full of thorny beauties. Your situation or condition fits the cliché that the office should seek the man. In a manner of speaking, your future job is looking for you.

The Industrial College is among the youngest of our military institutions. Its relative youth is not determinative of its importance. Your contribution to the science or art of war is at the foundation of our security. Your talents must be employed before a gun is fired or a bomb dropped.

The history of warfare is long. The history of total mobilized military effort dates only from Napoleon's levees en masse in the early 19th century. You all know his success. You know the reasons for his failure.

It is less than a hundred and fifty years since all out, national, mobilized

Sec. Kyes Defends
Reorganization Plan

Deputy Secretary of Defense Roger M. Kyes this week launched the Department's defense against the attacks that have been made on the President's plan for the reorganization of the military establishment.

Appearing before the House Committee on Government Operations, Mr. Kyes aimed particularly at refuting the charges that the proposed new administrative duties for the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff give that office too much power and tend toward the so-called Prussianized General Staff system.

The President's plan will go into effect on 30 June unless either House of Congress rejects it prior to that date. The full text of the plan and the President's explanation of its operation and need were printed in THE JOURNAL of 2 May.

At the first hearing, 18 June, the Chairman of the Committee, Representative Clare E. Hoffman (R-Mich) read a letter from Fleet Adm. Ernest J. King, USN, in which the war-time leader of the Navy expressed his views in response to a request from Mr. Hoffman.

Admiral King, who consistently opposed the early unification plans, wrote that he approved all the stated objectives of the reorganization and all but one of the provisions of the proposed Presidential order.

"If we must have a separate Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," he declared, "and I'm still not convinced we need one, he has no business selecting the members of other service teams nor should he control the tenure of their membership on the Joint Staff."

Concerning the proposed addition of

BUDGET HOLDS ON

The Bureau of the Budget late this week still had not told the Pentagon yes or no on the proposal to adjust military pay as a result of increases in the cost of living. The Budget Bureau has been studying the measure since 14 May.

Fears are growing that Budget officials may sit on the proposal until Congress adjourns. It remains to be seen, if this is the case, whether Defense officials will take their plan to the White House.

Army War College

Graduation ceremonies for the 1953 class of the Army War College were held 11 June at Carlisle Barracks, Pa. The class of 151 officers included 141 Army, four Air Force, two Navy, two Marine Corps, one State Department official, and one member of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Maj. Gen. James E. Moore, Commandant of the Army War College, introduced General John E. Hull, Vice Chief of Staff of the Department of the Army, who delivered the graduation address.

General Hull evaluated the necessity of good organization for complete utilization of our economic resources. He said: "we must know our capabilities now and in the future as these resources determine military strategy."

The graduates and their new assignments follow. All are colonels unless otherwise indicated.

House Group Readies
Tough Riders Anew

The House Appropriations Committee, unless there's a surprising last minute change of mind, will tack on the fiscal '54 Defense Appropriations Bill restrictive riders which will continue, though perhaps slightly modified, the Davis Amendment on temporary officer promotions, the Van Zandt Amendment on career officer retirements, and the household goods transportation limitation.

This action could mean a floor fight in Congress.

The Armed Services Committee repeatedly has gone on record during the past several months as sternly opposed to military legislation by rider. The Armed Services Committee, and especially its chairman, Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo), contends that the Appropriations Committee is invading its area of responsibility.

The Defense Department, which has been working hard during recent weeks to bolster Service Attractiveness, is known to have expressed strong opposition to continuation of the controversial amendments. Defense Department spokesmen joined representatives of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps in explaining how Service efficiency and morale is jeopardized by the restrictions.

Appropriations bill riders, virtually impossible of veto, have become increasingly frequent in defense funds legislation. That is why the Armed Services Committee took public note of the problem this session and promised to insist on its legislative prerogatives.

It is recalled that the Davis Amendment was amended this year by the Armed Services Committee to prevent thousands of officer demotions in the Navy and to permit liberalized rules for advancement of junior officers, particularly Reservists, in all the Services.

At that time, the amendment's author, Representative Glenn Davis (R-Wisc) said he would be willing to drop sponsorship of such an amendment for fiscal '54 if the Armed Services Committee could come up with a new plan for limiting promotions, regardless of the strict fiscal limitation imposed in the budget itself.

Chairman Short of the Armed Services Committee appointed a special subcommittee headed by Representative Leslie Arends (R-Ill), who as the Republican Whip in the House is a powerful figure on Capitol Hill, to look into the 1947 Officer Personnel Act, with special emphasis on the sections pertaining to temporary promotions. This subcommittee has not yet been able to make its report—in fact, has not yet heard testimony from all the Services. This means that there is little likelihood the Armed Services Committee will propose specific officer promotion limitations before the beginning of the fiscal year on 1 July.

The War In Korea

AN explosive 30,000-man Chinese Communist offensive ripped into Allied lines on the east-central front this week in the biggest Red drive in two years. Then suddenly, just as quickly as it started, action ceased abruptly and the 155-mile front returned to its characteristic lull. Several theories were advanced for the large enemy push at this time. Some authorities believed it was an effort to gain ground before a final demarcation line was agreed upon by staff officers of the main truce teams. Prestige may have been a determining factor. In any event, the enemy carved out a two-mile-deep bulge in the Allied main line, suffering about 5,000 casualties in the process, and then failed to exploit their gains. A day-to-day account of the fighting follows:

Thursday—In what was described as some of the heaviest fighting and cannonading of the last two years, 8,000 to 10,000 enemy troops struck at the central and eastern fronts and broke into the main ROK line in the east. They were halted, with large losses, by the U. S. Third Division in the center. The action was described by Lt. Gen. Maxwell P. Taylor, Eighth Army Commander, as "muscle flexing." In the air, converted Sabre jets dropped 22 tons of bombs on an air strip at Haeju.

Friday—The Reds kept up pressure on the U. S. Third Division on the central front despite casualties that mounted to 1,500. Fighting around Sniper Ridge broke off, but on the eastern front, the Communists still clung to three hills in the main Allies' line despite the effort of South Koreans to dislodge them.

Saturday—Advancing under the greatest barrage of the war, enemy troops swept down on Capitol Hill, driving off South Korean defenders and ripping four holes in the main Allied line. Without regard for casualties, the Communists hammered at UN positions from White Horse Mountain northwest of Chorwon, at Outpost Harry and its U. S. Third Division defenders, and at Sniper Ridge and Capitol Hill. During a 12-hour period, the Communists fired 118,000 artillery and mortar shells. The enemy was sent reeling back at Outpost Harry with staggering losses of 3,400 men killed or wounded since Thursday. In the air, Sabre jets shot down two MIG's, probably destroyed another and damaged one.

Sunday—Some 30,000 Communists, in a crushing attack along a 30-mile sector of the central and eastern fronts, buckled the South Korean 5th and 8th Divisions and rolled on for two miles. It was the biggest Red attack since the summer of 1951. Infantrymen of the U. S. Third Division battled furiously with the Reds in the trenches around Triangle Hills, and lost some ground. American officers with the South Koreans reported that ROK troops had been forced back across 10 to 15 miles of the front in the east-central sector. The major action was southeast of Kum-song and north of Pukhan River. The assaults on the east-central front were accompanied by battalion-sized attacks elsewhere across the front. The Reds also hit the Iron Triangle area west of Capitol Hill and around Christmas Hill to the east of the main push. Teaming together, the U. S. Third Division and the ROK 9th Division knocked back a thrust by between 2,000 to 3,000 Chinese northwest of Kumhwa in the Iron Triangle. A battalion of Reds were turned back in the Christmas Hill area by South Koreans.

Monday—The heavy Chinese assault which seemed on the verge of pushing to the 38th parallel was stalled by a record air blow by Allied planes that took the steam out of the enemy drive. About 500 UN planes, dropping bombs, rockets, bullets and jellied gasoline into a thirty-mile-square sector where the Communists were concentrated around the Pukhan River area, delivered a pulverizing aerial blow. Scattered reports said the fighting had dropped off considerably, and Outpost Harry reported a lull in the action. The enemy air force was active, dropping bombs on Seoul in what may have been an attempt to cripple one of the vital Han River bridges.

Tuesday—Counter-attacking South Koreans re-took the crest of Finger Ridge on the east-central front, and enemy troops fell back to the main dominating positions on Kyoam Mountain. Savage fighting erupted in the Christmas Hill sector, and it was reported by one source that the enemy has captured Anchor Hill and two nearby heights in bitter fighting. An Allied tank force attempting a raid near Jackson Heights on the central front ran into trouble when it hit a mine field. Some of the tanks were disabled and Communist artillery opened up on them. For the second straight night, enemy planes bombed the Seoul area. In the largest Communist aerial attack of the war, the enemy dumped bombs on Inchon and set fire to a large fuel dump. Flames 400 feet high burst forth, and most eyewitnesses described the blaze as the worst they had ever seen. Two Korean workers were killed and many others wounded. Fifteen Communist planes participated in the attack, the same number that struck at Seoul.

Wednesday—Fighting abruptly broke off. Only a single patrol clash was reported across the entire front.

military effort for the prosecution of war became a necessity for nations seeking to expand by military means. The complications of modern warfare have increased an aggressor's problems. It also follows that national defense against aggression has required a corresponding all-out mobilization. Defense mobilization is successful only where time or circumstances permit.

This Nation first faced the problem early in my career. We had time to plan and mobilize before we sought battle on our terms. The time factor may be less today. The necessity for proper planning is more urgent.

Because of limited experience in terms of history, I think we may have come to a false premise that total mobilization and warfare are coterminous if not co-extensive. It is the brush-fire war, the police action sort of war, or what Lenin called partial war which is not adequately or properly met by total or nearly total mobilization. These often become big wars unless promptly taken in hand.

It is true that if you seek to defend yourself against all possible enemies, or any possible combination, you will not have much left for anything else. When fully mobilized against all possible attack, you then must choose between existing in a fortress or risk the chancy business of smiting your tormentor before he disables you. Neither course is suitable for this nation.

There is another way open to us. We can pave it with something more than good intentions. Within this world there is plenty, if not more than enough for all nations banded against the threat of aggression today.

Within the past three years, it has been shown that we can fight what is sometimes thought as a little war, if not a speedy victory, then at least well enough to keep that war from spreading. That is something at least. But, something more is needed. Here is where you enter.

From the graduates of this Industrial College, this nation must look for appreciation and understanding that our efforts must be related to our capacities. These capacities need not be bound exclusively to the treasures of nature within our boundaries. There is a greater wealth. It spreads to and from lands across the sea. The willingness of other nations to bind themselves and their fortunes in these United Nations, will challenge your intellects and test the academic skills you have cultivated here. These are among some of the great assets we have.

Put these capacities together—relate these possibilities to the enduring peace all of us seek and you will have earned your tuition—many times over.

What I urge upon you seems like an impossible task. Your first experience in the annual review of NATO requirements may incline you to think that there is no decent solution.

Simply because the difficulties appear insurmountable don't just give up. It has been confusing before. Remember the ancient Chinese philosopher's observation that what appears at night to be the horns of an angry bull reveal themselves at dawn to be the ears of a jackass.

Daniel Boone, the hunter and hero of legend and folklore, had a useful philosophy. In his old age he was having his portrait painted by a distinguished artist. He was a stolid and silent subject. He was infirm. His eyesight was impaired. The painter, to draw him out in conversation and striving for expression, asked him at one sitting if Boone had ever been completely lost in the forests in which he hunted.

The old fellow reflected a moment, then brightened and replied:

"No, can't say as I ever got lost, but I was bewildered once for three whole days!"

Good luck and good hunting to you all.

seven more Assistant Secretaries of Defense, Admiral King commented that it appears "that the Department of Defense is going to get as many civilian chiefs as it has military mouths to feed."

Admiral Richard S. Edwards, USN-Ret., who had been Chief of Staff to Admiral King, backed up his Chief's views and added the thought that the proposals concerning the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff could lead to an elite corps of General Staff officers separated from the fighting services.

Chairman Hoffman already has indicated his opposition to the reorganization plan by introducing a resolution which would cancel the proposed authority of the Chairman of the JCS to veto the assignment of any officers to the Joint Staff or remove such officers once assigned. Hoffman's resolution likewise would deny the Chairman the proposed authority to set up an agenda for the JCS.

Opposes Hoffman

Deputy Secretary Kyes, while detailing the accomplishments proposed under the reorganization, concentrated his fire against the Hoffman resolution proposing to cancel the two provisions relating to the Chairman of the JCS. He said: "Summarizing, then, what do these two subsections do, and what don't they do?"

"They do permit the Chairman to manage the work of the Joint Staff, thus permitting him to present to the Joint Chiefs of Staff the agenda items they have decided to study in a workmanlike and proper manner, and to relieve the JCS of administrative detail, and they permit him final approval of nominations to the Joint Staff and the right to remove those who fail to work effectively in this assignment or who are considered inappropriate for such duties. Only these results were sought by the Rockefeller Committee and by the Secretary of Defense. Only these things are intended by the President. In view of the numerous safeguards so painstakingly written into the law in 1947 and again in 1949 as regards the Joint Staff, the Joint Chiefs, and the Chairman thereof, only these results can eventuate from the Plan.

"If it is these results and these alone which will be accomplished, what are the things which are not done? What are the protections against the dangers we are told do exist, which in fact do not exist and cannot develop? Let me summarize them:

"1. The Chairman may not assert any command power, either over his own parent service, or over the Joint Chiefs of Staff. He had no such powers under the law. He gets none here. There is a specific provision of law which says he cannot get them.

"2. The Chairman moves to no new position of eminence on the Joint Chiefs. The 1949 law said he has no vote. He gets none here. His status remains that of a co-equal member.

"3. There is no diminution of the civilian control over him. He remains in exactly the same relationship to the Secretary, the National Security Council, the President and the Congress, as the Congress established for him in the 1949 law.

"4. The Plan does not transfer to the Chairman any of the statutory functions of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. They remain responsibilities of all four of the Joint Chiefs, and his authority as regards these duties is as a co-equal member only, no more.

"5. The Plan in no way affects the basic statutory responsibility of all four of the Joint Chiefs of Staff—not just one of them—to be the principal military advisers to the President.

"There is no enlargement of the size of the Joint Staff, set by law in 1949 at 210 members and remaining at that size under the Plan.

"7. There is no change in the statutory safeguards to protect the historic combatant functions of our famous fighting units such as the Marine Corps and Naval Aviation.

"8. There is no change in the statutory requirement that the three military departments be separately administered.

"In short, Reorganization Plan No. 6 as submitted by the President is a carefully worked out plan to improve the management of two important segments of the great defense establishment. First, it proposes to permit the Secretary of Defense to streamline the internal business and managerial organization of the Department to achieve economy and efficiency, and second, it is designed to improve vital national defense planning by removing administrative detail from the JCS and permitting more efficient supervision and operation of the small staff assisting the Joint Chiefs of Staff."

New Asst. Secretaries

In his over-all explanation of the bill, Secretary Kyes contended that the proposed new Assistant Secretaries would be staff advisers to the Secretary of Defense and would not sit in the chain of command.

Commenting on some of the new duties to be given the proposed assistant secretaries, he revealed that the Assistant Secretary for Supply and Logistics will be assigned the responsibility for recommending modernization of the entire system of supply, working closely in that task with the Secretaries of the Army, Navy, and Air Force who already are engaged in such a study.

Discussing the proposed Assistant Secretary for Research and Development, he gave an emphasis to the importance of research which previously had been discounted by Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

Backs Research

"In the age of science in which we live," Mr. Kyes said, "there is nothing of more importance than that research in all matters of concern to the military establishment should continue to keep us in the lead in the development of new weapons and new machines. To do this, we feel that we must improve the supervision of the research and development program of all of the Services."

Concurrently, he added in respect to the proposed Assistant Secretary for Applications Engineering: "Closely Allied to the field of research is the problem of production of that which is decided upon, the end result of the research without which not much is realized by the expenditure of research funds. In this highly technical field, we feel considerable improvement can be made."

Adequate Family Housing

Significantly, he pointed out that one of the functions of the new Assistant Secretary for Facilities and Installations would be the "assuring that adequate family housing for Armed Services personnel is provided."

In respect to the proposed Assistant Secretary for Health and Medicine, Mr. Kyes pointed out that such a position would give rank and prestige to the "sort of medical man we wish to attract, and will make it possible for us to do a better job of caring for the health of our men and women in uniform." No mention was made in this connection of medical or dental care for dependents of Service personnel.

Renew Riders

If the Armed Services Committee makes no proposal, the Appropriations Committee on which Representative Davis serves is ready with a rider, certain to draw fire from Armed Services Committee members.

As for the Van Zandt Amendment, which prevents voluntary retirement of career officers (non-regulars are not affected) below the statutory age except for "hardship" or "good of the Service" approved by the Defense Secretary, it is pertinent to note that the original sponsor of the rider, Representative James E. Van Zandt, a member of the Armed Services Committee, has said for months that the amendment is no longer necessary.

Nonetheless, Capitol Hill sources report that the Appropriations Committee is showing every indication of continuing this amendment, although possibly in a modified form.

The new restrictions on movement of household goods voted at the last minute as a rider to the '53 Appropriations Bill also likely will be recommended again by the Appropriations Committee.

The Pentagon meantime is hopeful that the Armed Services Committee will be able to head off these and other contemplated amendments aimed at the Services, but past experience has demonstrated that the riders are almost always hastily considered in the closing days of Congress. The wishes of the Appropriations Committee usually are granted in the speedy voting.

Army Combines Two Courses At Ft. Leavenworth College

A new course of instruction, the Associate Command and General Staff Officers Course, will replace two previous courses at the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., General John R. Hodge, Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., has announced.

Replaced are the General Staff Officer Course and the original Associate Command and General Staff Officer Course.

The first class of the new course will open 24 Aug.

The new course of instruction is designed to train officers for duty with the general staff of combat divisions or logistical commands. The lessons taught will also familiarize the officer students with the general staff duties at corps and Army or communications zone level.

Two Phases

The course is divided into two phases with the first phase, of 12 weeks duration, including such subjects as the principles of war, orientation and general principles of staff procedures, fundamentals of combat, and the capabilities and limitations of elements of all types of combat divisions and logistical commands.

Students are split into two equal groups for the remaining phase of four weeks duration. One group specializes in staff work in a combat division, the other in staff work in logistical commands. Officers who are unable to attend for more than 12 weeks because of their civilian occupation, or other reasons, may graduate at the end of the first phase.

Officers successfully completing the 12-week phase may return at a later date

An apple for the teacher!

How television helps your child to know and grow

Television has been aptly called an extension of human sight. It broadens the horizons of every viewer—young and old, and for that reason alone merits the title "teacher."

But when you see television in its deliberate role of educating the youth of America—with specific programs aimed at every age level—you will understand why leading educators predict that today's generation of children will be the most intelligent and best informed of all.

Start with a tiny-tot program like Ding Dong School (10 a.m., EDT, weekdays, NBC).

You'll agree completely with The New York Times' television critic: "It imbues in the youngster a sense of friendliness, confidence and faith that is truly magical."

TV takes you right up the "grades"—all the way to informative programs like Youth Wants to Know, American Forum of the Air, and Today at the UN.

And then, of course, there are the great and historical events that are broadcast by television as well as by radio: political conventions, the inauguration of a President, the coronation of a Queen.

Today, thousands of schoolrooms are TV-equipped for reception of programs of educational interest. And by means of closed-circuit TV, classrooms can be visually unified for lectures and demonstrations, making television a lecture hall of wide proportions and a vital new tool in teaching.

Just as NBC—a service of RCA—pioneers programs that teach your child to know and grow, so one of the great objectives of RCA is to make television the most effective instrument of education ever known.

Navy Hospital Corps Has 55th Birthday

Secretary of the Navy Robert B. Anderson paid tribute this week to the "heroism, sacrifice and untiring efforts" of the members of the Navy Hospital Corps as they celebrated the 55th anniversary of the Corps on 17 June. Its history, he said, has "become a legend of valor."

At the same time, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, informed members of the Hospital Corps that they "may be assured of the continued admiration and affection" of the Marines. He noted that the professional skill, bravery and loyalty of the Hospital corpsmen "have won for them the deep appreciation and respect of military men everywhere, and by virtue of their close association through many years in combat area, the especial high regard of all Marines."

Rear Adm. C. J. Brown, Acting Surgeon General of the Navy, also extended his congratulations. He told the Corpsmen that their work as part of the Navy's medical team "has materially benefited the Medical Department in maintaining the Navy's low mortality rate."

Created by an Act of Congress on 17 June 1898, the Hospital Corps is unique in that it is composed entirely of enlisted and ex-enlisted personnel. More than 350 top decorations have gone to Navy Corpsmen serving with the Marines in Korea, including one Medal of Honor and 17 Navy Crosses.

Navy Engineering School

Work on the Engineering School building program at the Naval Postgraduate School, Monterey, Calif., is progressing rapidly, according to School officials, and the first classes are expected to occupy the new buildings by the Fall of 1954.

You'll get special attention from Journal advertisers—they cater to Service personnel.

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

$18 Million For Carriers

The Navy will spend about $18 million to convert three aircraft carriers, according to the Long Beach Naval Shipyard.

The three vessels—Bon Homme Richard, Shangri-La and Lexington—will be equipped with the new canted deck which was recently tested on the USS Antietam. They also will get additional catapults, new radar and electronics equipment and additional space to store new jet planes.

The Bon Homme Richard is now undergoing conversion at the Mare Island Naval Shipyard and the Shangri-La is at the Puget Sound Naval Shipyard. The Lexington probably will be converted at Puget Sound beginning next Fall. Each conversion will require 18 months.

TOP STUDENT

Lt. Comdr. Louis J. Papas, USN, has received the highest grades of more than 500 Naval Officers to have studied at the George Washington University since 1946 under the Holloway Plan.

Commander Papas, a naval aviator, made a near-perfect average during his course of study at the University. At the same time he maintained his required flying time for the Navy and for two years was a member of the Varsity golf team.

Thai Admiral Visits

The Commander in Chief of the Royal Thai Navy, Admiral Yuthasastr, arrived in Washington this week for an official visit, during which he made official calls and visited Navy and Marine installations.

Today he will witness Camid-53 at Norfolk, and on 24 June he will place a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. He will remain in the Washington area until 13 July.

TO QUANTICO — Col. Edwin P. Pennebaker, Jr., USMC, has turned over command of Marine Air Group 13, MCAS, Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii, to Col. Jas. L. Neefus, preparatory to reporting to the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

EAD For Reserve Marines

Despite manpower cutbacks in the next fiscal year military budget, the Marine Corps is making plans to keep (on a voluntary basis) as many as possible of its active duty Reserve officers.

Marine Corps Headquarters said this week that it is the "intention" of the Commandant, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., "to permit those Reserve officers who perform their duties in a creditable manner to remain on active duty on a voluntary basis as long as possible, in accordance with budgetary restrictions and the needs of the service."

Any officer may make a written request to remain on extended active duty beyond his normal release date, Headquarters said, but only for periods which do not extend beyond 30 June 1955. The arbitrary cutoff, it was noted, will "be extended in the event the current emergency continues beyond that date and future Marine Corps appropriations permit."

Reserve aviators who have served a tour of duty in Korea may ask for EAD limited to duty in the Naval Air Training Command and the Marine Training Groups instead of requesting unqualified extended active duty. Headquarters said "Such requests will be honored provided billet vacancies exist within those commands."

Change USMC Clothing Prices For Officers

New price tags will be placed on Marine Corps officers' uniforms effective 1 July, with 36 items boosted in amounts ranging from nine cents (for white collars) to $3.50 (for evening dress trousers).

Eleven other Marine uniform items will be reduced in price. These reductions range from a 50 cent cut in the price of khaki gabardine trousers to a cut of $11 on green gabardine coats.

New price lists also will be posted for Marine enlisted men on 1 July.

HQMC Plans To Select Up To Forty New LODs

The Marine Corps' limited duty officer plans for the current calendar year were outlined this week. Headquarters said it will select up to 40 male LDO officers for the rank of second lieutenant.

Eligible are temporary officers, temporary or permanent warrant officers, and enlisted men of the two top grades. Applications must be submitted to HQMC not later than 1 Aug.

Headquarters pointed out that Marine Corps Reservists—with the exception of former enlisted men of the Regular Marine Corps who accepted commissions in the Marine Corps Reserve during WWII and have served continuously on active duty subsequent to appointment—are not eligible. All vacancies are for males.

Requirements are as follows:

Maximum Age & Service

1—Temporary officers, whose permanent status is enlisted, warrant officer, or CWO, now serving in temporary commissioned grades of 2d Lt. or above, are eligible for consideration, provided they were less than 40 years of age and had less than 15 years total active Naval service on 1 Jan. '53.

2—Temporary or permanent warrant officers and CWOs, now serving in those grades, and technical and master sergeants are eligible for consideration provided they were less than 38 years of age and had less than 13 years total active Naval service on 1 Jan. '53.

3—All applicants must have completed a minimum of 10 years active Naval service, exclusive of active duty for training in a reserve component, on 1 Jan. '53.

4—All applicants must be able to complete a total of 30 years active Naval service prior to reaching 55 years of age. Active duty for training will not be included in computing this service requirement.

Physical

Applicants who are selected for appointment as LODs will be directed to submit a complete report of physical examination at the time the results of the selection board are promulgated.

Headquarters said commanding officers will be required to include a statement of recommendation in endorsing the application. They may recommend the candidate "with enthusiasm," "with confidence," "as adequate," "with hesitancy," or as "unsuitable." They also may indicate that they lack sufficient observation to permit a recommendation.

Complete details, including an application form, are included in Marine Corps Memorandum 31-53.

Col. Williams to Lead RCT

Col. R. H. Williams, USMC, will command the Regimental Combat Team which leaves from Camp Pendleton, Cal., on 3 July for duty in Hawaii.

The force, as previously reported in THE JOURNAL, will consist of 4,000 officers and men who will undergo six months' extensive training with the 1st Provisional Marine Air-Ground Task Force at the Marine Corps Air Station, Kaneohe Bay, Oahu.

Special emphasis during the training period will be given to night tactics, amphibious and helicopter techniques, and coordination among the supporting elements attached to the RCT. All machine and mortar gunners will be put through requalification and all riflemen will be required to go through the combat rifle course.

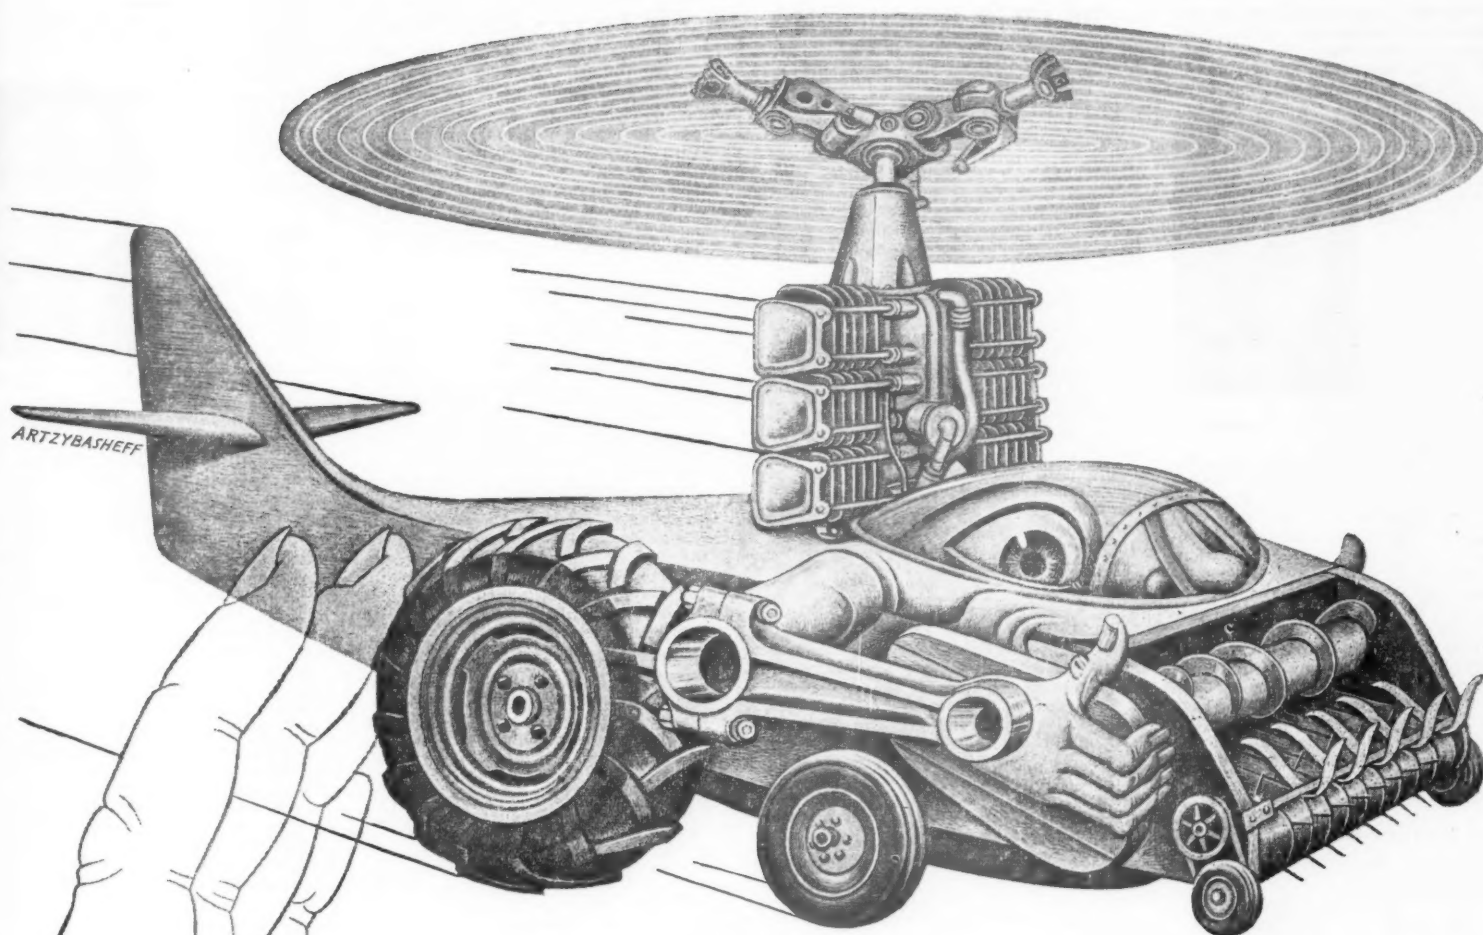

Tactical problems will be kept to the squad, platoon and company level until October, the Marine Corps said. At that time, units will go into the field for six weeks of battalion-level training in night infantry problems, amphibious maneuvers and field firing.

Climax of the intensive training will take place in late November when the RCT will stage a full-scale amphibious assault on Maui.

Seek Methods To Cool Air Force's Hot Planes

An Industry Advisory Committee will work with the Air Force in developing an equipment cooling system for supersonic planes.

Beyond the speed of sound lies the temperature barrier, an atmospheric condition that creates extremely high temperatures when great speeds are attained. The temperature rise with an aircraft flying 1000 miles per hour would be 230 degrees Fahrenheit, and 800 degrees F. at 2000 mph.

Conserving weight, providing high capacity, squeezing equipment into limited space and satisfactory performance over this constantly increasing temperature range are some of the problems confronting equipment manufacturers supplying components for aircraft and missiles. Where the equipment developments cannot keep pace with the rapidly increasing aircraft and missile temperatures, cooling systems must be provided to cool the equipment.

The Industry Advisory Committee will provide guidance to equipment specialists at the Air Research and Development Command's Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, O., on problems requirements, developments and installation of aircraft equipment cooling systems.

Members of the committee are:

Maj. Robert O'Clock, chairman, Equipment Laboratory, Wright Air Development Center; Ashley P. Adkins, alternate chairman, Equipment Laboratory, Wright Air Development Center; Harry Dornbrand, Republic Aviation Corporation; Edward D. Mead, jr., Glenn L. Martin Company; Lloyd H. Gardner, Boeing Airplane Company; Robert A. Pasell, North American Aviation; John L. Allen, Douglas Aircraft Company; John W. Anderson, McDonnell Aircraft Corporation; John R. Emerson, Northrop Aircraft Incorporated; Dr. Jack R. Woolf, Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation, Fort Worth Division; and Daniel Friedman, Naval Research Laboratory, who is providing liaison with the Navy on committee findings.

AF Has New Transport. B-36 Carries Engines Outside

A B-36 with four spare engines attached to its under-belly landed recently at Kelly AFB, Tex.

The engines, encased in two blisters mounted on the fuselage just forward of the wings, were transported in this unorthodox manner because of limited space inside the plane.

Curious onlookers at Kelly grouped around the plane when it landed, examining the blisters which resembled two bombs, ready for release on either side of the fuselage. This was the first time that a plane carrying spare engines outside its cargo hold had ever landed at Kelly, officials recalled.

Lt. Gen. Johnson Will Fill AF Post At U. N.

Lt. Gen. Leon William Johnson, USAF, Continental Air Command CG, and a Medal of Honor winner, has been appointed by President Eisenhower for additional duty as senior Air Force representative to the Military Staff Committee of the United Nations.

His new duties will not affect his status at Mitchel AFB, N. Y.

General Johnson was one of the first four flying officers of the Eighth Air Force and served as its assistant chief of staff for operations during its formative period and when it went overseas in June, 1942. In January, 1943, he assumed command of the 44th Bomb Group. He went to Africa on loan to the Ninth Air Force in June, 1943, for the attack on the Ploesti oil field in Rumania. He received the Medal of Honor for leading that raid.

After two months in Africa, General Johnson took the group back to England where he remained on active duty until the end of the war. In 1946, he was appointed deputy to the assistant chief of staff for personnel at Air Force headquarters and a year later became commanding officer of the 15th Air Force at Colorado Springs, Colo.

General Johnson was appointed commander of the Third Air Division of the Air Force in Europe in 1948 where he organized facilities in England for maintenance and support of B-29's rotated to Europe on training missions and for transport aircraft used in the Berlin Airlift. In addition to his other duties, he was appointed in 1950 as chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group for the United Kingdom.

When the Third Air Division was elevated to the Third Air Force in 1951, General Johnson was retained as commander. He assumed his present assignment in January, 1952.

Gen. Harris Honored For Role as ADRC Pioneer

The award, presented by Maj. Gen. Donald L. Putt, USAF, vice commander of ARDC, was presented for service rendered by General Harris as Director of Plans and Programs and later as Chief of Staff, Headquarters, ARDC, between 14 July 1950 and 31 January 1953.

General Harris has spent 20 of his 26 years in the service in aeronautical engineering.

Add Four Weeks To JAG Gen. Staff Officer Course

Air University Hdqs. at Maxwell AFB, Ala., has announced that the Judge Advocate General Staff Officer Course of the Air Command and Staff School here will be expanded to a 14-week course, commencing 8 Sept. No summer course is being conducted.

According to Col. John E. Blackstone, Course Director, the former curriculum will be revamped, enlarging even more than previously the practical work in applying sound solutions to day-to-day legal problems met in the field.

Heretofore the course has been a 10-week course, conducted four times a year, with an average enrollment of 70. The last class taking the 10-week course graduated yesterday, 19 June.

The JAG Staff Officer Course, designed only for graduate lawyers, was instituted at the Air Command and Staff School in January 1951 to foster the development of military lawyers in their three-fold capacity as officers, staff members, and judge advocates. The course is designed to maintain a high level of professional legal competence in the Air Force.

Named BAMC JAG

Maj. Colin O. Villines, JAGC, has been assigned as Judge Advocate at Headquarters, Brooke Army Medical Center, Ft. Sam Houston, Texas. He was assigned as Assistant Staff Judge Advocate, Headquarters, First Army, Governors' Island, N. Y., before coming to Ft. Sam Houston.

Delivering men and bulk cargo to front line advanced combat bases calls for a rugged plane, built for a rugged job. Such is the combat-proven Fairchild C-119—workhorse of all our Armed Forces for a solid decade. Designed to handle massive bulk without dismantling, to load and unload without special equipment, to land where the going is rough and short, to paradrop men and supplies or evacuate wounded—the "Flying Boxcar" is not in a class by itself. It is a class by itself! No other cargo plane can compare with the C-119!

"Morale is one of the best weapons in our nation's armory."—SECRETARY OF DEFENSE CHARLES E. WILSON.

Attacks on Services. The Committees of Congress and the Department of Defense must keep constantly alert these days to differentiate between well-founded recommendations against Service activities and those which would result only in further lowering the rights and privileges of the men and women serving their nation.

New complaints against the Post Exchanges have been filed before the Hess Subcommittee of the House Committee on Armed Services. Fortunately, in that case the Subcommittee, it is understood, has decided to take no adverse action against the PX system, contenting itself with calling the alleged violations to the attention of the Department of Defense. It is recalled that a few years ago such protests led to drastic restrictions being placed on the operation of the PX's and also on the Commissaries. Now, we learn, the matter of Commissaries administering to the needs of Service families has again been brought up in the course of the hearings before the Senate Appropriations Committee.

In the meantime, those who have been attacking the Exchange system are planning to bring their case before the Government in Business Subcommittee, which already has been serving as a sounding board for other attacks on the Services—box manufacturers have protested Quartermaster construction of crates for shipping the household goods of Service personnel, liquor dealers complain against officers' clubs cooperative buying, a fountain pen manufacturer dislikes the grade of ink used by the Government, etc., etc.

The attacks against the Exchanges will be continuous, yet figures show that food and service outrank their sales in retail merchandise. The average PX customer in the states spends between $22 and $25 per month in his exchange. Of each dollar thus spent, 21 cents goes to food and service and 21 cents to tobacco. On the other hand, the local small business firms received about $75 million a year from PX's in contracts with civilian concessions, of which there are more than 2,600. The taxpayer benefits, too, for since the war the PX's have paid about $20 millions out of its funds toward the recreation and entertainment of enlisted personnel and also has reimbursed the Government ($1,350,000 in 1952 alone) for the use of utilities.

It is generally agreed that, along with the failure of Service pay to keep abreast of the times, the deterioration in rights, privileges and conveniences has been one of the big factors in the decline of interest in Service careers. Congress should, therefore, be very chary of imposing further restrictions on important Service morale activities.

Time for Pay. Congress approved this week and sent to the President a bill to increase the pay of Washington, D. C., policemen and firemen by 12 per cent. New wage agreements have been reached whereby an increase of 8½ cents per hour has been given to steelworkers. The Senate Judiciary Committee has voted out and placed on the calendar of the Senate a bill to increase the pay of members of Congress by $10,000 a year.

But the proposal by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.) to grant small cost-of-living increases to the members of the Armed Services is still tied up in the Bureau of the Budget. It will be recalled that the Department of Defense proposed in 1951 that the Services be given an over-all increase of 10 per cent in base pay and allowances. Congress, however, while granting the full 10 per cent to Federal Civil Service employees cut the Services' increase to about 5.2 per cent for the active list and four per cent for retired personnel. Meanwhile, the cost of living has continued to rise. It was to bring Service pay more in line that former Secretary of Defense Lovett proposed an eight per cent increase.

The Senate Report on the proposal to increase Congressmen's pay contains many interesting arguments which apply alike to Service personnel—except that the Congressional pay is higher. For example, it is pointed out in the Report that in 1939 when Congressional salaries were $10,000 a year the average Federal income tax was $372, so that the members had about $9,628 after taxes. Today their pay is $15,000, taxes about $2,394, leaving $12,706. However, applying the cost-of-living index and the decline in the purchasing power of the dollar, the Report finds that in terms of 1939 dollars members of Congress are now getting only $6,724, or nearly $3,000 less

Wants No C of L Pay Tie-in

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Have those of us in uniform become so completely benumbed by the intrusions of the past few years into our pocketbooks and upon our prestige that we grasp at the illusory and deceiving short-range benefits of this latest pay "raise" with a "gimmick"—the cost of living—in the vain hope that the deluge has stopped?

My case may not be entirely typical, but it is not exceptional as an illustration as to where many of us stand—or better still, lie prostrate—today. In 1947, after 11 years of commissioned service and 15 years devoted to this life that I dearly love, I had a little better than $2,600.00 not good mind you, compared with my contemporaries from college who were in civilian pursuits, but not bad for the Army—an $800.00 leave bond and a $400.00 State bonus. Today, after two pay "raises" since 1947, complete inundation by inflation, a three year tour that required meticulous attention to selling the Army to a civilian population, and a short tour in Washington, my savings and bonus are gone and my leave bond is but a fond memory.

Today, after 17 years of commissioned service and 21 years devoted to this career that I still love, I have nothing but fond memories and $2,100.00 in debts. Riding through the inflation has cost me $5,900.00 over and above my pay, and not a penny has gone into emergencies such as sickness other than normal hospitalization insurance payments. Unfortunately the money that I had to borrow to ride through this period was paid to me in 45c dollars.

Just leave me alone! I don't want a pay "raise" with a "gimmick." Left alone, I can be out of debt just about the time that my oldest youngster is ready for college. Leave me alone and let me pay my debts with these 45c dollars as long as they stay at 45c. If the dollar goes to 90c I can still repay my debts—although it's economically unsound—with the difference between my present pay and the cost of living. However, if my pay is tied to the cost of living, an inevitable reduction in pay as the 90c dollar returns insures that I'll carry my debts to my grave and that my children will not get an education. Rising interest rates and "hard money" presage that eventuality. It happened before in the thirties; it can happen again. The proposed 8% pay "raise" will raise hardly a stir in the national press, but the subsequent and inevitable vote-getting "Army Pay Cut 15%—Cost of Living Index Down" headline would be drastic for those of us who are relying on the maintenance of a fixed income through periods of both cheap and expensive dollars to get our weary heads above water. I am operating now on a slim margin that will begin to pay my debts, after moves and uniforms, will put my youngsters through college, and will leave me with a mere $50.00 per month during my last five years of service toward a home. The cost of living "gimmick" leaves me no margin to put a roof over my wife's head upon retirement.

Let's be sensible. We've ridden through the worst of the inflation as forgotten step-children. We have to bet that prices will go down so that we can repay our debts. We can't afford to take a belated "sop" now with the risk that it and much more will be plucked away at a later date as the result of the workings of an intangible and nebulous formula.

than in 1939. By the same reasoning and figuring, the Report concludes that an increase of $10,000, bringing Congressional pay to $25,000, would mean that they would have only $10,157 in 1939 dollars left after taxes.

The Report also points out that classified Federal employees have enjoyed five pay raises in six years, in 1945, 1946, 1948, 1949 and 1951, with the top basic pay rate going from $8,000 to $14,800—an increase of $6,800 or 85 per cent in the highest rate.

These comparisons, cost-of-living figures, taxes, depreciation of the dollar, and so forth, apply with equal vigor to the members of the Armed Forces. If the Bureau of the Budget delays further in releasing this vital measure, the Committees on Armed Services would do well to initiate hearings on a pay bill without waiting any longer.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Liberators of the Ninth U. S. Army Air Force attacked airfields at Gerbini and Catania in Sicily in force during daylight on 10 June. Bombs were seen to burst in hangars and administration buildings and throughout dispersal areas at both airfields. At least two dozen enemy aircraft were seen to be destroyed on the ground. Our formations were attacked by 20 to 25 fighters, three of which were shot down, two others probably destroyed and others damaged. From these operations all our aircraft returned safely.

50 Years Ago—

To dispose of the report that the squadron of United States warships now gathered at Che Foo, China, under command of Rear Adm. Robley D. Evans, has been assembled as a protest against Russia's continued occupation of Manchuria, it is stated at the Navy Department that it is in no way related to the Manchurian affair. The situation with regard to Manchuria is distinctly better than it was two months ago. A treaty between the United States and China has virtually been agreed upon whereby all trade barriers will be abolished.

85 Years Ago—

Congress has ruled that the composition of the Army shall remain as now, with a general, lieutenant general, 5 majors and 10 brigadier generals; 5 regiments of artillery, 10 of cavalry, 45 of infantry, with one corps each of adjutants general, inspectors, quartermasters, paymasters, subsistence, the engineer corps, with its battalion of soldiers; the ordnance corps, with its enlisted men; the medical corps, and its hospital stewards; the chief signal officer, the bureau of military justice, the judge advocates, 30 post and 6 regimental chaplains, one band at West Point, 1,000 Indian scouts, the retired officers, and the Military Academy.

SecDef Wilson Defends Budget Reduction As General Vandenberg Urges Increase

Congressional Appropriations Committees late this week were preparing to wind up hearings on the fiscal '54 defense budget, which goes into effect on 1 July.

The week's budget activity was highlighted by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg's recommendation that the proposed Air Force budget of $11.7 billion be increased to $13.1 billion.

The full text of General Vandenberg's statement is published herewith. Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson told a press conference, however, that he is sticking by his guns. He said he had looked over General Vandenberg's figures very carefully, but added that "I saw nothing that would lead me to change my present recommendations for the budget now before Congress."

General Vandenberg submitted his compromise figures—the original Truman Administration budget called for $16.8 for the Air Force—at the request of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

At his press conference, Mr. Wilson was asked how much could be taken out of the '54 budget if there were a truce in Korea.

He replied that "it can't be any major amount," but said that "something can be taken out. It won't be as much as some people would expect," the Secretary added, "because obviously we can't safely take the people out of Korea for six months or longer."

Following is the full text of the letter of General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Chief of Staff, U. S. Air Force, to the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Armed Services appropriations:

"Members of the Congressional Appropriations Committees have asked how much more money above the $11.7 billion current Fiscal Year 1954 appropriation estimate the Air Force can effectively use during Fiscal Year 1954 to continue towards the achievement of a 143-wing program at the earliest practicable date. In determining the answer to the above question, I have had the Air Force make a study of its capability to continue at an orderly rate toward the 143-wing program. A brief of the study herewith presented represents, as of this date, a statement of the fiscal needs of the Air Force in Fiscal Year 1954 to accomplish this. The amount needed is $1.435 billion for a total Fiscal Year 1954 appropriation of $13.123 billion.

"It is emphasized that this is not a recomputation of the budget as conceived on the date when the original Fiscal Year 1954 budget was presented. Recent restrictions, for example personnel ceiling and the freezing of Public Works funds, have imposed a delay in the original rate of Air Force progress which has necessitated a rephasing of the Air Force build-up.

"This new rephasing gives priority to the creation of combat units and defers the scheduling of support units. Also considered in this recomputation has been the new policy of reduction in re-order lead time which defers aircraft production financing until the next fiscal year.

"The original Fiscal Year 1954 budget estimate amounted to $16.778 billion. Because of the reduction in production rates, due either to a delay in delivery of aircraft within the funding period or the application by the Air Force of its policy for initial production at reduced rates to permit more complete testing of new types of aircraft prior to production acceleration, the Air Force on its own initiative revised its initial estimate to $15.201.

"The reduction from $15.2 billion to the new requirement of $13.1 is made possible by the following:

"1. Deferred financing of aircraft production due to shortening re-order lead times. This amounts to $655 million.

"2. Deferred procurement of B-47 type aircraft necessary for the training of combat crews after the force build-up. This amounts to $400 million.

"3. Elimination of an aircraft combat reserve designed to replace wartime losses for a very short period of combat. This amounts to $233 million.

"4. Cancellation of a planned trainer aircraft. This amounts to $250 million.

"5. The reduction in operating funds due to stretch-out of the force build-up. This amounts to $558 million.

"In line with the above, the newly requested recomputation of funds required in Fiscal Year 1954 to carry on the 143-wing program follows:

Title	Current Budget	Added Requirements (in millions)	Revised Requirements
Aircraft & Related Procurement	$ 3,495	$ 333	$ 3,848
Major Procurement Other Than Aircraft	625	50	675
Acquisition & Construction of Real Property, Maintenance & Operations	400	260	660
Military Personnel Requirements	3,200	600	3,800
Research & Development	3,300	172	3,472
Reserve Personnel	475	475	475
Air National Guard	14.9	14.9	14.9
Contingencies	147.1	31	147.1
TOTAL	$11,688.0	$1,435	$13,123.0

"For Aircraft and Related Procurement, the $353 million would provide for the procurement of 447 airlift and support aircraft.

"For Major Procurement Other Than Aircraft, the $50 million would provide for the phased procurement of equipment including ground powered equipment and electronics equipment associated with the increase in forces above the 120-wing program.

"For Acquisition & Construction of Real Property, the $260 million would allow the construction of minimum essential facilities associated with the increase in the size of the Air Force.

"The increase of $600 million for Maintenance and Operations would provide for their support. This would include an increase in the flying-hour program from 8.1 million to 9.3 million hours in FY 1954.

"The $172 million for military personnel would provide for pay and allowances for the additional military strength for the FY 1954 increment toward the ultimate strength required for the 143-wings. The military personnel strength for end FY 1954 would be 1,035,000.

"This revised 143-wing program will be achieved as follows:

Wings End FY 1954—120

Wings End FY 1955—135

Wings End FY 1956—141

Wings End FY 1957—143

"In summary I believe the Air Force can effectively utilize $1.435 billion in addition to the $11.688 billion during FY 1954. Thus $13.123 billion will enable the Air Force to continue its build-up to an 143-wing objective."

AMS Lists Short P. G. Courses for Fiscal '54

A series of 10 short postgraduate courses will be conducted by the Army Medical Service during the next fiscal year.

The courses represent an important feature of the in-service training program carried on by the Army Medical Service for Medical Corps officers. They also are open to a certain number of qualified civilian physicians and surgeons who wish to avail themselves of the excellent training facilities of Army hospitals and installations near their homes.

The courses are designed to help medical officers in outlying installations keep abreast of recent medical advances, aid them in developing and improving techniques and skills, and serve as a means of developing qualified teachers and instructors for all phases of professional education and training within the Army Medical Service.

ROKs Pose Military vs. Political Problems

THE Korean prospect, at this writing, is as uneasy as it is unpredictable. The vital question is whether, as assumed, the ROK combat forces will continue to recognize that their commands come through the American channel. It has not previously been questioned—but neither, until Thursday, had there been general knowledge that the entire provost-marshal's establishment of the South Korean government was of political rather than military complexion, and that it recognized the civilian governmental authority, rather than the military responsibility to the United Nations. Thursday brought an awakening, with President Rhee's order to his provost to free the prisoners (of anti-Communist affiliation) in the South Korean camps. The order was obeyed, and only a handful of American soldier-guards at those particular camps undertook to stop the flight. At the camps under American guard it was a different story, with firm resistance and numerous casualties.

The folly of Syngman Rhee can have the gravest results, not only to the truce negotiations (a prime condition of which was the handling of prisoners of war by the neutral commission) but to the battle situation itself. Immense lengths of the line across the peninsula are held by ROK divisions, and even where occidental divisions are present, ROK personnel has been doing a great deal of the hand-carrying of ammunition in the forward mountainous sectors. Any change in the behavior of ROK military units would, of course, constitute mutiny, but the analysis of behavior is much less important at this stage than is the military behavior itself and its immediate consequences.

FORTUNATELY, most of the ROK field commanders have been engaged in battle with a disciplined foe long enough to know a great deal more about combat necessities than does their civilian president, a determined old man with pitifully scant knowledge of military matters. The ROK officers are far better aware of their dependence upon the United Nations command, not only for indispensable supplies at all times, but for urgently needed support from adjacent units in every major engagement of the war. Their natural loyalty to South Korea is presently in direct conflict with their military discipline as well as their good sense. Much depends upon General Mark W. Clark's authority and skill in an extremely critical time.

RUSSIAN policy makers, who might have been highly pleased by our current troubles in the Far East, have had no time for self congratulation, in view of their own very considerable troubles in Europe. The mass uprising in East Berlin was not on schedule at all. Its immediate occasion has its almost comic aspect. The initial gathering of East Berlin workingmen had actually been encouraged by local Red authorities (one wonders what has happened to them, by the way) who took quite seriously the recent benign turn-about in Moscow, and genially offered to allow the Berlin workingmen to parade in protest against what they not unreasonably regard as excessively long working hours. What started as a parade to blow off steam in a harmless manner soon developed into a tremendous explosion, with a great many less tractable citizens joining in the affair, quitting work, wrecking an occasional factory, and starting fires in Communist installations.

There were two results. Similar uprisings began almost immediately in Magdeburg, Chemnitz, Leipzig, and elsewhere. But in all the centers, as in Berlin, local Soviet authorities belatedly took steps to call a halt to the whole show. An armored division moved into East Berlin, guards set up barriers, and military police began swiftly to make arrests and impose the usual Russian punishment in advance of trials. There are the usual declarations that all the uprisings were stirred by agents from the "imperialistic powers," and there undoubtedly will be the conventional Russian-type "confessions" to that effect. The astonishing fact, perfectly obvious to the discomfited Reds as well as to the outside world, is that the root is in Moscow's phony benignity, plus the abiding determination of Germans, even after years of attempted sovietization, to remain German.

INDOCHINA, whose affairs already had seemed sufficiently unpredictable, developed an unexpected new worry this week, when King Norodom Sihanouk of Cambodia with a retinue of 30 crossed the border into Thailand as a voluntary exile, asking refuge. The Thai government allowed him to take residence in Bangkok as a political refugee, and from Bangkok the young ex-king's statement of his case was made public. He has previously stated his hostility to having Cambodia included in the French Union, and his desire for complete independence. But the French authorities declare that they have already acceded to the king's earlier requests, that he himself has signed acknowledgement of this fact, and that he had agreed to go to Paris this week for a discussion of his further demands. Whether the present dramatic demonstration of displeasure will work to Norodom's advantage, and will bring about Cambodia's independence, is doubtful. Several of the Cambodian royal family are stated to be much less desirous of independence, and it is thought likely that one of that friendly group may be installed on the Cambodian throne until the military situation of Laos and Vietnam is more stable. Any firm decision must wait until France itself has had a new government in office long enough to make a statement of France's own policy toward nervous members of the French Union in Southeast Asia. The extremist Cambodian demand for independence rather than inclusion in the Union almost certainly contemplates an appeal to the United Nations, which France itself has been most anxious to avert and which in truth a good many others of the United Nations would gladly postpone until the Korean settlement is effected, and the front in northern Vietnam itself is more quiet.

Colombia, where trouble has been threatened ever since 1948, with Laureano Gomez acquiring more and more the appearance of a dictator, has produced a revolution which in its early stages has been amazingly free from bloodshed. The new acting President is Lieutenant General Gustavo Rojas Pinilla, whom Gomez lately removed from the Colombian army command. General Rojas' easy seizure of power evidences the fact that the Army remains loyal to him. Wary as the United States has always been about approval of coups d'etat, bloodless or otherwise, the unseating of Gomez himself is not generally regarded as cause for anguish, and if the Rojas promise to restore constitutional government is carried out, the end of a particularly obnoxious five years' dictatorship will be welcomed. The 1948 insurrection (marked by the assassination of the Liberal leader, Gaitan, and street battling while the Pan-American Conference was in session at Bogota) was profoundly disturbing, for until then Colombia had long been one of the most orderly of Latin American republics, and even now the Army's role in restoring political order is without Colombian precedent.

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

ROA Official Hits Program—New laws must be passed and present ones enforced if the nation's Reserve forces are to become an effective instrument of military power, the House Armed Services subcommittee was told this week. Col. Charles M. Boyer, executive director of the Reserve Officers Association, in an attack on Reserve practices, charged that the Army and Air Force Reserve forces are poorly trained and equipped, and that the Navy's program also needs overhauling, as the result of Pentagon policies.

Colonel Boyer was the first and only witness in the initial session of the subcommittee called by its chairman, Representative Leroy Johnson (R-Calif.), to consider complaints from Reservists that the present Reserve program is wasting the Government's money and frittering away the time of the Reservists.

"From the standpoint of having a reserve trained and capable of being ordered to duty to neutralize with success the effect of a sudden attack, I can state definitely that we do not have such a reserve at this time," Colonel Boyer remarked in his opening testimony.

He declared that the country no longer has the luxury of "time," as it once had, to organize in the event of open hostilities. He warned that the nation cannot plan to complete training after initiation of an attack.

"Korea revealed that the services had to call and utilize reservists without affording them refresher training," Colonel Boyer stated. "It is common knowledge that the more training an individual receives while on active duty, the less refresher training will be required after reporting to duty."

Generally, the Colonel said, on the basis of a nation-wide survey among Reservists of all three Armed Services, comment and criticism of the Reserve program fell into two categories: that which would be corrected by Administrative action, and that which would require Congressional action.

He listed the chief complaints about the Army Reserve program as: 1) An unrealistic and weak program of training, 2) Weak instructors, 3) Lack of training aids, texts and current information on the latest developments, 4) Lack of public information program, 5) The need for stabilizing units, 6) Too much administrative details, 7) Lack of control from the Department of Army level leading to misinterpretation of policies at the field level, 8) Lack of equipment and training facilities, 9) Lack of attention to morale, 10) Present regulations preventing the enlisting of the first three grades after they have been separated for a certain length of time, 11) Lack of an equitable promotion system, 12) The present system in determining date of rank, 13) Lack of opportunity to take two weeks' active duty training, and 14) Lack of opportunity to join a unit in the more isolated areas.

Colonel Boyer asserted that to a great extent the deficiencies in the Air Force Reserve program are similar to those existing in the Army program, but he added that the AF program "is not as well organized as its sister service." He said that Reserve officers of the Navy and Marine Corps are "satisfied" with their training program as a whole, but there are certain specific weaknesses which are largely administrative in character.

There is a great need for Congress to enact legislation to provide the Reserve forces with a "procurement system" that would assure Reserve units with a sufficient number of enlisted men, Colonel Boyer said. He also called for additional official posts in the Pentagon to directly supervise Reserve affairs.

Although "unit commanders are compelled to attain a minimum strength of enlisted personnel," Colonel Boyer charged, no procurement system is available to furnish the individuals needed. This condition could be at least partially alleviated through the effective application of three provisions of the Universal Military Training and Service Act, "with certain modifications."

He recalled that the UMTS Act provides that draft eligible youths are required to serve six years in the Reserves after completion of two years on active duty. This provision should be enforced, although he admitted that "there might be some public reaction to requiring an individual who has served two years in Korea to serve in a unit."

He pointed out that Secretary of Defense Wilson has the power to transfer a percentage of draftees who have completed their basic training to serve with units of the Reserve. Colonel Boyer endorsed the enforcement of this provision, but added that a good public relations program would be needed to offset possible criticism by the men who were kept on active duty rather than channeled into the Reserves.

Colonel Boyer also pointed out to the subcommittee that the UMTS Act requires individuals deferred from the draft because of occupation, dependents or educational pursuits, to enlist in the Reserve, and further requires that they serve in a unit if their residence is in the vicinity of a unit to which they could be assigned.

College Training For Officers—The Armed Forces are hopeful that Congress, in voting funds for fiscal '54, will approve adequate amounts for off-duty education of officers and enlisted personnel. The Army, for example, has asked payment for 75 per cent of the tuition of enlisted personnel and 50 per cent for officers enrolled in off-duty courses at civilian institutions.

It is pointed out that about 30 per cent of the Regular Army officers and 60 per cent of non-Regular officers on active duty do not possess college degrees. Most of these Regular officers were integrated after the war and have not been able to take advantage of the G. I. Bill of Rights. Congress was told that many officers in the ranks of major and lieutenant colonel find themselves handicapped for assignments because they lack a college education. Because of Congressional restrictions, no educational aid could be given to officers in the current fiscal year.

Army Travel Expenses—Almost two-thirds of every dollar the Army spends for travel of personnel will go to pay costs of moving officers and men to and from overseas, according to information made available to Congress. The "Travel of the Army" request in the '54 budget is $299,347,000, of which 62.9% is for overseas deployment and return. The breakdown for the other items are 3.2%, entry into the service; 25.2% training and deployment in U. S.; and 8.7% separation from the service.

FEC Chief Nurse—Lt. Col. Katherine V. Jolliffe, former Chief of the Nursing Service at Letterman Army Hospital, has been named Chief Nurse of the Far East Command.

She will succeed Lt. Col. Alice M. Gritsavage, who has held that post for the past three years. Colonel Gritsavage has been assigned to the Nursing Service staff of the Percy Jones Army Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...Deputy Defense Secretary Roger M. Kyes has sent to the Service Secretaries for their comment tentative proposals to consolidate PUBLIC INFORMATION activities of the Armed Services at the seat of Government and thereby drastically cut personnel performing these duties. If the plan were adopted without modification, it could mean elimination of all GENERAL AND FLAG OFFICER billets in the PubInfo set-up of the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps. Many individual Service responsibilities for news media will be abolished or transferred to the PubInfo Office of the Defense Secretary. That much appears certain.

...Armed Forces SALES COMMISSARIES are under new attack on Capitol Hill. Lobbyists and spokesmen for retail groups, which have been hitting at the PX's, have broadened their barrages to include the Commissaries. The Senate Appropriations Committee went into the matter during secret hearings this week. It is recalled that arbitrary PRICE INCREASES have been ordered in Commissaries during the past few years because of action by the Appropriations Committees.

...The Armed Services Committees in Congress will suffer a PRESTIGE LOSS if they do not block the increasing trend of other Committees to probe and act on matters affecting the Services. The Appropriations Committees have acted repeatedly on matters normally within the responsibility of the Armed Services Committees (page one). Now, the Government Operations Committee is getting in the act. Chances are that Chairmen Saltonstall and Short of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees will try to PUT AN END to this usurpation of their authority, particularly the latter whose Committee is particularly sensitive on this subject.

...Latest available statistics on BATTLEFIELD PROMOTIONS for Army officers in Korea show that more than 10,000 were given accelerated advancement to first lieutenant and captain, while about 5000 have received combat promotions to major, lieutenant colonel and colonel (31).

...The Army and AF military staffs have worked out intricate details for TRANSFER OF SCARWAF (Special Category Army With Air Force) personnel to the Air Force, but there will likely be no implementation until the report of an AD HOC COMMITTEE, headed by Assistant Secretaries of each Service, is acted upon by the Defense Dept. The Committee is slated to go into the problem of a separate AVIATION ENGINEER CORPS for the AF, may also, in view of current reorganization action, look into the entire matter of Army support services for the AF.

...The impending loss on 30 June of authority to RECALL RESERVISTS involuntarily will mean an even more serious shortage of nurses in the Armed Forces than now exists. There had been plans to recall some NURSES INVOLUNTARILY in fiscal '54. The Army, for example, has current vacancies for some 1100 Nurse Corps officers.

...A switch in Defense Dept. policy which now permits the Services to charge TRAVEL EXPENSES of guards used to return AWOL's and deserters against the OFFENDER'S PAY will result in a saving of hundreds of thousands of dollars in the '54 budget.

...The Army spends about $1 per year per man for AWARDS AND MEDALS, including such items as Sharp Shooter Badges and Anti-Aircraft Bars, as well as combat decorations like the Silver Star.

Guide words for today —

"Whether we want it or not, the responsibility for the perpetuation of democracy . . . is squarely on our shoulders, and unless we maintain the strength to defend all liberty we are certain to lose our own."

—ADMIRAL ARTHUR W. RADFORD

Nowhere is democracy stronger or more deep-rooted than in America . . . for only in America have the people had the freedom, the initiative and the self-reliance to make democracy work. Maintaining the strength of our democracy, then, is largely a matter of preserving the freedom which is the source of that strength. Only with a healthy, dynamic, free enterprise economy can we remain strong enough to keep freedom alive in the world.

Build Electronics Plant

The General Electric Co. has constructed a new military electronics plant near Utica, N. Y., for research, development and manufacturing operations for the production of specialized electronics equipment.

The new installation, engineered and constructed by Walter Kidde Constructors, Inc., is one of the most complete plants in the country for the supply of electrical power for a wide range of currents, frequencies and voltages.

The plant consists of a steel frame, single-story structure, 842 feet long and 352 feet wide with a two-story office and laboratory section 632 feet long and 75 feet wide. Four penthouses are used for special engineering development work on antennas.

While a major portion of the plant is for bench assembly of a wide variety of electronic military equipment, a substantial portion is devoted to development and testing of new types of equipment.
